Free Download in English: When you have a virus on your computer, you want to delete it as soon as you can. If you use Windows XP as your operating system, this tutorial will help you remove it right away and get your computer back working. Prerequisites You must have access to an XP installation CD and a Windows XP installation disk. You need to be able to get into a command prompt (an interactive command window) and navigate to the drive your Windows XP installation is stored on. You must also be able to fix your system with a command prompt. How to Fix a Virus A virus can make your computer malfunction. It may make your computer crash and prevent you from starting any programs. If you are using a

Windows XP operating system, you can fix the problem by manually removing the virus that is causing the problem, or by installing the correct software. Step 1 - Remove the Virus If you manually remove the virus, use the XP installation CD to access the command prompt. Follow these steps to manually remove the virus that is causing the problem: Type in "cd" (one space between cd and the next letter) to make sure you are in the correct directory. You may be prompted to enter another directory. Type in "dir c:" (without the quotation marks) to see the files stored on your computer's hard drive. You should see a number of files. Find the file with the name of the virus (usually Dnsrbl or Mal.Mshta.exe.png). To find the virus: Right-click the virus file, and select Delete. The file will disappear from the list. Click Yes to confirm the removal of the virus. This step may not remove all the software that was infected with the virus. Click OK to close the program. Step 2 - Reinstall the Operating System If you need to reinstall
